during which the lecturer analyzes the broadcast from the Marxist viewpoint. On Friday nights the class listens to the Bruce Lockhart broadcast.

3. Subjects taught at the political indoctrination schools include History of the Communist Party, Marxist Economy taught by Dr. Ulbrich, Foreign Trade and Socialist Planning. Two or three months after completing the course graduates take examinations on these subjects. Promotion or continuation in leading positions in Czech industry depends on the results of these examinations. On entering the school, each participant fills in a questionnaire giving his life history, political affiliations and military status. This questionnaire is made part of the industrial card index. At the end of the course each participant is criticized by the group leader on the basis of political opinions and political loyalty. A report on each man is sent to the cadre man of the individual's factory, to the cadre section of the industry and to the secretariat of the Communist Party.
4. Some undecided individuals have been convinced by the political schooling in favor of Communism through a carefully planned approach. Otherwise, the courses are a failure. This is particularly noticeable during the embarrassing silences following foreign broadcasts when even the lecturer is unable to disprove the factual reports. Anti-Communist views are often expressed in private by members of the class. In each group into which the class is divided for sleeping and study, there is a convinced Communist who often makes anti-Communist statements in order to draw out the real opinions of suspected anti-Communist.

* Comment: These may refer to Senohraby and Radosovice, two small towns about 18 km. southeast of Praha, near Ricany (050/197).
